

Since 1969 at the service of Italian social innovation

Those reading these words might be surprised to learn that, for over 50 years, our “small” association has managed to carve out a relevant space for itself on the Italian agricultural union scene, traditionally dominated by giants.

Today, the AIC ecosystem, built on a balance between its central and regional offices, is constantly growing, as we strive to tell the story of our country’s diverse agriculture, faithfully interpret the complex needs of our members, and provide an array of services on the ground.

We are talking about the agriculture at the heart of the famous Mediterranean diet, but also about the agriculture of Italy’s vast inland and mountainous areas, where farmers and breeders are true custodians of the land.

Each of these denote specific characteristics, creating a unique mosaic that is “made in Italy” food. Our members come from these varied contexts and share our strategic goals and ideals: strengthening and growing businesses in Italy and abroad, protecting the environment and promoting biodiversity, rights and dignity for agricultural workers, enhancing the role of women, strengthening short supply chains and the direct relationship between producer and consumer, and cooperation with developing countries.

Our daily commitment is aimed, on the one hand, at bringing positive change to local communities and, on the other, at concretizing the needs of territories in transformation. Thus, AIC is actively contributing to social innovation in Italy and beyond, supported by the European Green New Deal, which promises a more sustainable future for everyone’s agriculture.
